

OLIVER BENTLEY

This Road

runs from the place I run to at the invite of the inhospitable inbetween where clouds are drawn and roughly held my own among them, briefly—before descending driven on toward the dwellable, concrete, committed with the best of intentions in the valley where those clouds began to form